

The Talk on the Foreign Investment Law of the People's Republic of China

What people say

Mr Anthony Neoh, SC

Chairman of the Asian Academy of International Law:

“The new foreign investment law showcases the Chinese government’s commitment in facilitating foreign businesses by further opening up its markets and providing protection of lawful rights. Today’s talk offered very useful insights on how the law would be implemented and enforced.”

Ms Carmen Kan,

General Counsel, Bank of China (HK) Ltd:

“With more favourable conditions and opportunities in the Mainland, the new foreign investment law will definitely benefit Hong Kong. I believe the business sector in Hong Kong would welcome the new measures including the protection of their investment and intellectual property.”

Hon Christopher Cheung

Member of the Legislative Council:

“The talk is very informative. It facilitated my understanding of the new foreign investment law. The level playing field for overseas investors under the new legislation reassures the businessmen from Hong Kong that Mainland China still remains an attractive investment destination.”

About the talk
